The Clover Insights business analytics app is available from First Data – one of the world's largest credit card processors, managing nearly half of all credit and debit transactions in the U.S. The company also processes transactions with Apple Pay and gift cards for major brands like Starbucks.In 2014, First Data has launched Insights, an online reporting platform that provides real-time tracking of internal sales data and values, along with local business information. To simplify branding, Insights has been renamed Clover Insights alongside the latest update. We looked at the program to find out what it offers and what businesses can benefit from it. Clover POS IntegrationClover Insights is integrated into the Clover Station POS platform, an all-in-one, cloud-based POS system that includes tablet, station, receipt printer and cash drawer. It is both EMV and PIN capable and has Apple Pay integrated. First Data also offers Clover Mini and Mobile terminals, which allow you to accept card and digital payments in the legacy cash register. Each Clover POS includes a proprietary application market that allows business owners to customize POS and reporting. Clover insights is integrated into the platform and automatically imports the necessary information, synchronizing well with the variety of apps available in Clover App Market.Cu however, Clover POS hardware is not required to use Clover Insights because it is available for download from iOS App Store and is accessible through the Clover Go mobile payment app from the Android Play Store that works with Clover Go contactless , chip and swipe mobile cards. Supported platformsAlthough the Clover POS platform and market facilitate access to real-time data, they can also be imported from other POS systems and commercial services. Large banks, such as SunTrust, Citi, PNC, and Bank of America commercial services use Clover Insights as Making Ignite Payments, Payments, Commercial services and other companies running on the First Data platform. First Data is constantly working to add more partners and it is important to know that there are separate markets for the US and the UK. This means that some partnerships can be exclusive to one country. Clover Insights is currently available as a stand-alone iOS app for Apple iPhones. It's somewhat integrated into Clover Go on Android and iOS, but reporting is limited. It can also be accessed by logging into Clover.com.Regardless of the platform, Clover Insights uses First Data's transmarmor and tokenization encryption technology to keep all sensitive data safe during transit between your devices. Related article: Need TransArmor Security? Key FeaturesThe most important feature of Clover Insights is the ability to access reporting through a variety of devices. These reports include daily revenue, transaction reporting, customer history, busiest hours, and more. For these reports to work correctly, the data must be synchronized correctly from the current POS system, which can be difficult if you do not use Clover's proprietary platform. Although real-time reporting through the Clover platform translates well into Clover Insights, some customers have reported delays of up to 24 hours in accessing data. Note that although the installation is quick, it may take some time to set things up correctly. Because Clover Insights is used by so many companies and financial institutions, it also allows you to see general transaction, expense, and revenue reports for nearby companies through the iOS app. This data is often delayed by up to a few days, but it's historic, so you can see your business compare. Small and medium-sized enterprises do not always have access to the data and analyses needed to forecast pedestrian traffic, sales and revenue. First Data has made this type of data available to major brands for years and is hoping Clover Insights will provide the same powerful resources for smaller companies. In addition to simple bar and line graphs, Clover Insights can also display a thermal map that lets you see revenue and pedestrian traffic around the city to see if other companies perform similarly. Using this data marketing efforts can be related to sales, you can collaborate or compete more effectively with other companies, fraud models can be detected, and more. You can also check industry trends in other cities. Instead of comparing the jewelry store to the ice cream shop next door, you can find out compare to jewelry stores in every city and city across the country. More details about Clover Insights for competitor analysis are available here. ConclusionAlthough First Data has renamed its Insights program to Clover Insights, it retains its basic functionality as a data collection, analytics and reporting system for retail enterprises. Clover Insights works much better integrated into Clover's full POS platform, but is also compatible with a variety of partner commercial banks and payment processors. Unfortunately, Android is not yet one of those partners, so you may have difficulty using it without an iPhone or iPad. You can access the mobile clover site, but it is not very convenient on a mobile device. It also has delays in receiving data from other POS platforms and troubleshooting can get difficult. In general, Clover Insights is a useful program with internal reporting and core competition that makes it useful for small and medium-sized enterprises looking to quantify their business efforts. It has its flaws, however, including the lack of customizable reporting and data synchronization issues. Be aware of this before you integrate it into your business. Do you use Clover Insights?
